LITTLE PONY

There once was a little chicken named Pony. Pony and her family were moving away because her dad had found a job there. All their stuff was loaded onto a truck. Pony's eyes were tearing up as she looked at their house for the last time.

All her friends from the neighborhood were there to see her off. She said goodbye to each of them. She held her mother's hand and they got in their car. Pony waved her hands at her friends until the car disappeared from sight around the corner.

From now on she wouldn't be able to see them as much. She wouldn't be able to play hopscotch with her friends under the mulberry tree. She wouldn't be able to buy bread and milk from the grocer Tosun. She remembered the day when she made a necklace from beads with her best friend Kikirik the squirrel.

She leaned against her mother and said how hard it was to move to a new place. Pony's mother patted her head. She knew how sad her daughter was.

Her mother said to Pony,
“It will be hard for all of us to leave but I’m sure we will also like our new home very much. We will make new friends. Isn’t that a nice thought?”
