TIMMY AND HIS CLASS

Spring had come. The lilies on the trees were blooming. The students of the school in the forest were very excited. There was not much time left before summer vacation. They wanted to prepare a nice show for the end of the year.

Mrs. Daisy asked her students,

“Class, how would you like to act out the play ‘The Parrot and the Musicians of the Forest’ in the end-of-year show?”

Then she explained the play. The play went like this:

"A warmhearted parrot living in the green forest was teaching his friends about cooperation. Each of the animals played a musical instrument. The animals made an orchestra where they played together in harmony. Then they gave concerts with the parrot as their conductor. The musical instruments were played with love and brought happiness to the forest."

The students of the forest school liked the play very much. They wanted to put on 'The Parrot and the Musicians of the Forest.'

A couple of days passed. The kids were waiting for their teacher. However, instead of her, Principal Cleverman entered the class.

“I have bad news for you, class. Mrs. Daisy is sick. She won't be able to come to school for some time. Mrs. Lily will be your teacher until she comes back.” He said.
